Welcome -- does your library participate in any consortia for resource sharing?

by Lauren Fancher - Thursday, 16 March 2006, 09:16 AM

Welcome to the participants in the Electronic Resources and Libraries conference 2006!

Brad and I are looking forward to talking a little about how Georgia's Virtual Library, GALILEO, manages electronic resources for multiple consortia, as well as provides opportunities for local resource management within the GALILEO portal. We are wondering how many of you are participating in consortia for resource-sharing, and how this affects your own resource management considerations?

Our library participates in a California statewide consortium for private institutions. We have experimented with a collection of e-books that is shared by members of the consortium but the response has been somewhat lukewarm. At this point it hasn't affect our current resource management considerations. --Locke Morrisey, Head of Collections, Reference & Research Services, University of San Francisco
