Ay, tear her tattered ensign down!
Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
That banner, in the sky;
Beneath it rung the battle shout,
And burst the cannon's roar;—
The meteor of the ocean air
Shall sweep the clouds no more.

Coaches

Mike Chambers first attained success as trainer for big league baseball teams and the 1928 Olympic teams. He came to Tech to serve in the capacity of trainer and immediately won the praise and respect of all. He introduced boxing on the campus in 1930 and produced three Southern A. U. champions in 1932 only to have the sport discontinued. Now he serves as coach of the weight men on the track squad besides his duties as trainer. He is one of the most valuable men on the coaching staff and one everyone is proud to have.

Bobby Dodd needs no introduction to the Southern football fan as he was recognized as one of the most dependable quarterbacks ever produced in the South. His first duty is to serve as backfield coach of the football team and his results here are nothing short of phenomenal. Then he takes a green freshman basket-ball team and turns out men ready for the varsity. When spring rolls around, he becomes coach of the baseball squad and produces a team that stacks up with the best in the South. His all-around worth can't be estimated and Tech is lucky to have such a man for a coach.

Coach Alex, as he is affectionately known, has given Tech the benefit of all his athletic experience. He first scrubbed football, then played varsity football, became assistant coach, head coach, and now athletic director, as well as head football coach. He has general charge over all athletics at Tech. His worth as a coach has been recognized nationally as he is a member of the official board of coaches named to choose an All-American football team each year.

"Punky" Mundorff serves as coach of the freshman baseball team and varsity basket-ball team. He played basket-ball, football and baseball in college and is of great benefit as a coach by virtue of his thorough knowledge of the game. His teams have met with pronounced success and are always among the leaders. His ability has been recognized by his being elected president of the Basket-ball Coaches Association of America for the coming year.

Jack Cannon coaches the line candidates for the football team. He has instilled some of the spirit of the Notre Dame "fighting Irish," where he was All-American guard in '29, into the Tech line which, since his arrival, has shown an inspired improvement over former years. The line is no place to try for if you're afraid of work. "Get your head-guards" has become the most familiar phrase on the practice field when "Satch" Cannon is around.

Mack Tharpe is the man who coaches the "Grey Devil" team or the scrubs who go out every day and act as "cannon fodder" for the varsity. He scouts opposing teams and teaches his team plays the varsity will see in games. Together with Coach Thrash he has charge of the freshman football team and the important responsibility of preparing them for future use on the varsity.

Coach Robinson instructs the boys who come out to play end on the football team in the gentle art of taking out the interference and getting the runner all in one motion. He is soft-spoken with a weakness for playing bridge but the halfbacks in the Southern Conference will vouch for the fact that his ends know how to play their positions.

George "Sack" Griffin coaches the sprint men on the track team and the tennis team. He is well qualified for this position as he starred in these sports while in college. His tennis team went through last season without a defeat. Also, he is assistant Dean of Men and the man the boys know as their friend. It is he who stands between them and their troubles with the faculty and looks after other difficulties that arise.
Managers

LAST season the affairs of the Georgia Tech Football Team were in the capable hands of Billy Owens and Ray James who took care of the finances and equipment respectively. Billy is a Phi Delta Theta, member of The Technique staff, O. D. K., and Pi Delta Epsilon. Ray, a Sigma Chi, is also an O. D. K. and active in the affairs of the student Y. M. C. A.

The cares of the Basketball season were put upon the shoulders of Manager Dick Dowling. The manager in this case was at considerable disadvantage since the team had to practice at the Atlanta Athletic Club every afternoon. Dick is a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity and belongs to Kappa Eta Kappa and the Scientia Club.

Alex Windsor and Jim Reynolds took care of things as far as the Track Team goes and did a mighty efficient job of it. Between Alex and Jim nearly every phase of campus activities are represented. Alex is a publication man and a member of O. D. K., while Jim is a member of Bulldog and the Interfraternity Council.

Bert Fant is proving himself to be a pretty fine manager of the Baseball Team, the buttermilks finding it harder every day to crash the gates at Rose Bowl, due to Bert's eagle eye. Bert is a Delta Tau Delta and member of the Scientia Club.
COACH ALEXANDER

Coach Alex, a mild, soft spoken, Southern gentleman who changes into a machine that advises assistants, lectures quarterbacks, instructs linemen, and leads his team to unexpected successes once he steps upon the football field. There is no extreme his boys will not go for him because he plays the game with them and backs them to the limit, win or lose. In more than twelve years as head coach he has achieved unparalleled success in building men, both mentally and physically, and is an excellent example of a man who is giving his all for his Alma Mater.

CAPTAIN NEBLETT

Howard "Iron Head" Neblett, the only man in the history of Georgia Tech who has captained the football team for two years in succession. Light in weight, but a super dreadnaught in spirit, leadership and ability, he will be sorely missed next year as he sits in the stands, squirming and muttering to himself, wishing to be out on the field once more bowling over tackles and tearing fullbacks limb from limb. It can be well said of him that he fought the good fight; the hoary athletic traditions of Georgia Tech have gained new brilliance by his work.

Sports Editor Georgian-American

"Not the strongest but the fighting-est" team he ever coached, is the way W. A. Alexander, head coach, characterized the 1932 eleven. The under-sized team that for the two years previous had battled the strongest opposition in the Southern Conference with only a skimpy share of victories as recompense, played to the absolute limit of its capabilities in the Conference campaign and finished with four victories, four defeats and a tie. The defeats were by close margins. Breaks played a decisive part in the games they lost. The Engineers of 1932 were never routed and never were out of the game until the last whistle.

"Alexander's Ragtime Band" closed out the season December 17 with a game in Memorial Stadium, Berkeley, Cal., against the Golden Bears. California played her best game of the year, coast critics said, and defeated the Engineers four touchdowns to one. The half ended with California leading 7 to 6 and Tech had looked just as good as the enemy. But in the last half superior weight and man-power swung the scales; the Bears marched to three more touchdowns. Yet in the closing minutes of play the Engineers rallied and drove over half the length of the field to the four-yard line, where their power was not sufficient to punch out a touchdown.

Twelve Yellow Jackets finished their careers there in the cold shadows of Memorial Stadium. They were Howard Nebbitt, twice elected captain; Roy McArthur, Casey Jones, Quint Adams, Tom Cain, Jerry Goldsmith, George Vierck, Sid Williams, Hugh Gooding, Jap Hart, Ben Cherry and Pat Barron, the last of the clan. Only three of them stood over six feet tall. Only one weighed over 200 pounds. For three years they had fought the best in the South, giving away ten to twenty pounds per man every time they played, yet never once losing their flaming spirit. In their final campaign, they communicated to the several Sophomores and Juniors on the squad their own dash and devil-may-care attitude toward the game and as a result they were idolized by Atlanta fans.

It was peculiarly fitting, then, that these boys should have been rewarded with a football squad in the South. They rode to California through the worst blizzard in sixty years, through temperatures ranging as low as 52 degrees below zero in the Nevada mountains. They had suffered a flu epidemic that may have cut down their strength for that final game. But from the moment the game was over the fun began.

Zimmerman, All-American Halfback for Tulane skirts Tech's right end for a small gain.
They attended a dance in Berkeley that evening. They were up early the next day and took that magnificent day-light ride down the coast to Los Angeles with tumbled mountains on the left and the blue Pacific on the right. After a sight-seeing trip in Los Angeles, they went aboard the palatial liner, Virginia, of the Panama Pacific line.

At daybreak Monday the Virginia put out to sea with the Engineers virtually in charge.

The boys had the run of the ship. As the vessel swished through the peaceful waters that were calm as a mill pond, the young men forgot all about disappointments in football.

They played shuffleboard, deck tennis and deck golf. They swam in a pool filled daily with fresh sea water. They lay on the top decks accumulating sun tan to show the folks back home. They danced after dinner.

And what they did to the rations was, and is, nobody's business.

After seven days of gorgeous loafing the party reached Balboa, the Pacific gateway to the Panama Canal. They toured the city, visited the ruins of old Panama and attended a dance in their honor in Panama City. The passage of the canal was made next day. It was a sight to stir the imagination and stimulate the interest of future engineers.

A three-day run over sunny seas brought them to Havana, where they left the Virginia and went ashore to a hotel. They were entertained at luncheon at the Havana Yacht Club by United States Ambassador Henry Guggenheim. They swam at a beach club in the afternoon and saw the sights at night. Next day they took another boat for the short trip to Key West and boarded the train for home.

The 23-day trip was made possible by agreement with the University of California. The Bears had taken a similar educational tour of the East after they played in Atlanta in 1931.

The Tech experiment was considered highly successful by the school authorities. Little time was missed from school since the boys were required to take their final examinations on the train going out.

The football record for 1932 proved that the Engineers were better than the final standing indicated.

They opened the season October 1st by defeating Clemson 32 to 14, in which a 50-yard run by Charles Galloway featured. Nearly every man on the squad had a chance to step.

Kentucky returned to Atlanta Grant Field after a long absence and the two teams went into the final quarter tied 6-6. The Engineers seemed to have an edge, but could not put over the deciding touchdown. Late in the game a questionable decision by the umpire on a forward-lateral pass gave the Big Blue team the decision 12 to 6. It was a tough one to lose.

Auburn, a team destined to go through the season undefeated, played Tech October 15th in a downpour of rain that grew heavier as the game went on. A scoreless tie seemed impending when the Plainsmen put on a big push that carried them over for a touchdown and a well-earned 6 to 0 victory.

At Chapel Hill October 22nd, Coach Alexander started his "regulars," but the vets could get nowhere against North Carolina's stubborn defense. So he substituted an entire second string and the fun began. The youngsters got away to one long run after another—"Wink" Davis' 68-yard sprint being just one—and the final score was Tech 43, North Carolina 14.

The Engineers lost to Vanderbilt 12 to 0 the next weekend in Nashville. The heavier Commodores swept Tech aside in two furious thrusts as the game opened. Then Tech found a defensive combination that stopped Vandy cold. But Vandy also kept Tech bottled up and the game ended with no more scoring.

The "old folks" of the squad turned in their best game against Tulane in Atlanta November 5th. After yielding two early touchdowns to the Greenies, the Engineers came back to take a third quarter lead of 14 to 13 by brilliant play. Yet in the closing minutes of the game the great Dan Zimmerman staged a one-man offensive to march over for a touchdown that won 20 to 14.

Thus in the six games against Conference teams—one of them being among the strongest in the field—the Engineers had won only twice, yet they never once had been crushed. Every game they lost was close. They seemed doomed by fate to come close but rarely win.

The seniors were worn out. So Coach Alexander elected to start the second team against Alabama and leave the second team in there regardless of the result. It was a daring thing to do, but his only hope to bring the squad up to the Georgia game in any sort of shape.

At the opening of the game the Engineers repulsed two determined Alabama drives on the 10-yard line. Abandoning the kicking game, they shook Charles Galloway loose on a fake spin play outside tackle. He reversed his field three times and ran 71 yards to a touchdown.

From then on the Tech second-stringers were inspired. They kept changing their defense and broke up drive after drive by the heavier Tigersmen. Late in the game Alabama staged one final, determined offensive. Coach Alexander saw the first real chance to hold the slender six-point lead, and rushed his varsity center, guards and tackles into action. The Crimson Tide was held on Tech's nine-yard line for downs, the ball lacking an inch of a first down. The strength of the Crimson Tide was spent and the Yellow Jackets rode out to a victory.

That game was the high point of the season. It was a stunning upset to expert predictions and it was a forecast of what might be expected in 1933 from the younger set.

The Yellow Jackets invaded Gainesville for a game with Florida November 19th and barely won 6 to 0. They were still playing over the Alabama game, perhaps.

It rained for the Georgia game. It always seems to do so. Grant Field was slippery and fancy football was out of the question. Neither team could use much beyond simple plays and the game ended in a scoreless tie.

"It was tough not to win," an alumnus said to Roy McArthur in the dressing room after the Georgia game.

"Shucks, I'm glad we didn't get beat," was Roy's modest reply.

Courage, sportsmanship and modesty were attributes of the 1932 Tech eleven. And it is likely that that same spirit will be carried on this year by the new team. It is supplied with more good players, more heavier players and should finish the season with an improved showing.

Grey Devils

The success of our varsity football team of last fall was due mainly to the hard fighting boys known as the Grey Devils. This group of boys never get the publicity or praise that is given the varsity, but everyone well knows that these hard fighters are just as deserving and are held in high esteem by the students and coaches alike.

These boys under the direction of Coach Mack Tharpe were, practically speaking, the backbone of the varsity, for they were expected to run the opposing team's plays against the regulars with only a couple of days drill on the formations of the opposition, and the effectiveness of the above work either is the making or breaking of the stalwarts who adorn the white and gold uniforms.

Grey Devils

Grey Devils
This year's freshman team showed probably more promise than any team in the last few seasons. In several of their games the team exhibited tremendous stamina and power. Especially did they look good in the game with the Florida baby gators. The Jackets really stung them thar gators.

In the opening game, the Tech team encountered in Monroe A. and M. a very fit foe, winning only after a terrific battle throughout the four quarters. The game ended with the Baby Jackets on the top of a 12-7 score.

The next game, that with the Auburn Freshmen, was a most exciting game, ending in a 6-6 deadlock. In justice to the Tech team it must be said that the Auburn men were outplayed for the major part of the game.

In the Florida game the Jackets looked almost invincible, showing both speed and power. It was the Tech boys' game all the way, and when the whistle blew for the end of the game the score stood Tech 23, Florida 0.

Rain soaked and mud laden, the boys from the little hill on North Avenue lost to the Georgia Bullpups by the narrow margin of 14-13. Those who dared the rain and cold witnessed a most colorful game despite such disagreeable conditions.

Among those who were outstanding in the Jacket tilts are Boyd, Martin, the Willcox brothers, Gibson, Lyons, and Eubanks.
NEVER before at Tech do we believe that a coach has taken over the reins of a major sport confronted with the number of obstacles that confronted one Robert E. Lee Dodd. At the beginning of the season everything looked rosy, that is at least just before the season, but the spectacles took a darker hue when Duck McKee, outfielder, Jimmy Dawson, catcher, and Crum, a pitcher, signed professional contracts. With these obstacles, together with the loss of many of the veterans by graduation, the head of the baseball nine was confronted with the job of winning a game and not the league as the prospects were heretofore.

Plugging a gap here and grooming a new man for this or that position, Bobby set about his work with the industry of a Trojan. And considering the handicap under which he was working, he may look upon a season well worth while and a work well done, despite the story that the score tells to the contrary.

With the scanty material in the beginning under the tutelage of Bobby, with his untiring efforts he was the proud possessor of many ball players of championship caliber by the close of the season. Wilson, Stribling, Mathis, Crawley, Hogsed, Whitley, Parris, Hardin and Waldrip developed into seasoned players as the season went on, improving with each mistake and watching never to make the same error twice.

The year 1933 rolls around and Coach Dodd is confronted with a much different picture. Veterans and promising material from last year's freshman squad have filled the gaps and the horsehide followers are promised a season that is well worth while, with an infield of Gibson, Hardin, Whitley, Martin, Grossee and Hogsed, Pug Boyd as catcher, Roberts, Poole and Skowen as the outfield, and Stribling, Baker and Carpenter as the leading contenders for the pitching assignments. Coach Dodd and Manager Bert Fast are anticipating a season that is well worth while.

Just before the opening of the season, Bill Hogsed was unanimously elected captain of this year's edition of the Yellow Jackets. He was a very outstanding man on the freshman squad three years ago, and since has proved to be a main cog in the varsity infield. He is a capable man as a leader and is expected to lead his team through a successful season. Sheriff Crowley, whom we all think of as one of Tech's leading slabsmen, was elevated to the position of alternate captain to compensate him for the ability shown on the diamond during the past few years here at Tech.

The Yellow Jackets swung into action on the seventh of April against the Auburn Plainsmen as a young and untried team. Auburn reported a still better team than the Tigers of '32. After a series of two games at the Rose Bowl, the Jackets had done themselves proud by splitting the series with the mighty Tiger by the tune of 4-3; 11-7. Dodd's team gave every indication of developing into a real conference contender as the season progressed giving the boys more experience. On foreign soil and a very wet field the Jackets dropped a decision to Alabama by a close score. The second game of this series was called on account of rain. In a return game at the Flats, Tech took the measure of the Red Elephants by the tune of 6-4.

As this book goes to press, Oglethorpe and Tech are engaged in a heated series to determine the winner of the city title. The first series of two games was a split affair, Tech winning the first and the Stormy Petrels blanking the Jackets in the second fray. The third game of this four-game series was quite a thriller, Oglethorpe coming through the last half of the fifteenth after Dodd's men had scored the first half and practically put the game on ice. The final score was 4-3 after a thrilling pitchers' duel between Dixon of Oglethorpe and "Cannon Ball" Baker of the Jackets. With only one more game left in this series the Jackets are determined to deadlock affairs by taking the measure of the Petrels at Spiller Field today.

1933 Basket-Ball Season

PLAYING its first year in the newly formed Southeastern Conference, the 1933 basket-ball team finished a fairly successful season, winning ten out of sixteen scheduled games. Included in this record are seven victories and five defeats in the Southeastern Conference itself. The season was marked by team play that at times verged on the spectacular and at other times was only mediocre.

Hugh Gooding and Leon Woodall were the first string forwards, and in them Tech had a pair that were dangerous to the opposition at all times both because of their efficient shooting and their accurate passing as well as their all around good team play. Gooding's team play is especially worthy of note.

The guarding of our basket was led by the stalwart, unexcecutible Roy MacArthur, who compiled his third year at that job this season. Roy is not the flashy type of player, but his coolness in a pinch as well as his unusually fine passing, were the mainstays of the club. The other guard position was taken care of by John Poole, who alternated at times with Jesse Davis, one of last year's veterans. Added to those already mentioned much support was given the team in reserve material by Tom Bothwell and Robert Van Houten, who saw plenty of action during the season.

Practice at the start was slowed up by the absence of those players who were with the football team in California. However, the season got under way immediately after the Christmas holidays, when the Yellow Jackets journeyed to Clemson where they defeated the Tigers by a single point in a game that was anybody's game until the very moment the final whistle blew, the score being 29-28.

Following the battle with the Clemson Tigers, the World's Champion Celtics visited Atlanta and defeated the Jackets by a margin of nine points, 40-31. At times in this game the passing and team play of the Tech team drew as much attention as that of the celebrated attack of the professional champions.

The Jacket five next ventured to Athens, the lair of the Georgia Bulldog, where they were defeated by the score of 30-25. Virlyn Moore, crack forward of the Bulldog aggregation, led the attack against the Yellow Jackets, garnering 18 points.

Following this setback, the basketeers took a trip through Tennessee, meeting Sewanee and Vanderbilt en route. The Tech five defeated Sewanee rather handily to the tune of 38-27.

On the return game with Tennessee, came the most colorful, if not the most proficient basket-ball team to face the Jackets during the entire season. The team was composed of Mexican youths on a good will tour of the United States, and while on the tour they were playing the leading college teams in that vicinity. Their lack of experience was more than overshadowed by their eagerness, but they were defeated by the better trained Tech team 41-28.

The Kentucky game, which followed next on the schedule, was more or less of a rout for the Southeastern Champs and they subdued the Jackets by a 41-22 score. The Kentucky attack was led by their All American forward, Sale.

The return game with Tennessee went to the Vols 33-26, but the Jackets rallied their forces to defeat Auburn by the score of 29-26. The Jacket five also defeated the Sewanee team in a loosely contested game by the score of 38-26.

In a nip and tuck battle up to the final whistle, the Tech five bested the Georgia Bulldogs again 32-30. This victory made it two out of three from last year's champions.

As has been the habit of Georgia Tech teams in recent years, the team could not begin to click in the Southeastern Tournament and were defeated in the first round by the University of Tennessee, 36-24.

Excluding the tournament, the Tech basketeers scored a total of 491 points to 471 scored by the opponents. This is an average of 31 points per game for Tech and 29.5 for the opposition.

The Jackets will suffer considerably through graduation, losing Gooding, Katz, MacArthur, Davis.

Ed Hamm, beginning his second year as track coach at his Alma Mater, called the squad together the latter part of February, and in just a few weeks had his men in the pink of condition. The team was well rounded in both field and track events and everything pointed to a very successful season. The squad journeyed to Clemson on April 9th for a duel meet with the Tiger cindermen. Hamm's aggregation was a heavy favorite; and as dusk settled over the mountains of Carolina, the Jackets had subdued their foe by the tune of 82 to 43.

Eddie Foxhall, brilliant high and low hurdler, was elected captain of the squad just before time for the meet to get underway, and in only a very few minutes had led his team to an early victory over the Tigers by taking first place in both high and low hurdle events.

The following week-end found the stubborn Kentucky Wildcats entrenched at the Flats for an attack upon our squad, but again Hamm's men flashed their superiority and gained an 80 to 51 decision.

Then it was only two weeks before the squad would face its sternest test of the season, with a dual meet over in the classical city with none other than the Bulldogs from the University of Georgia. Due to the adverse conditions of the team, the trip proved to be a barrier that the Jackets could not surmount, going down to defeat by a very close score to our ancient rivals.

On the week-end of May 14th, Hamm and his clan were hosts to the Southeastern A. A. U. champions, the Auburn Tigers. Everything pointed to a sweeping victory for the men hailing from the "Lovely Village," but again the boys from the Flats fought a great uphill battle only to lose to a much superior squad.

The Southern Conference Track meet was held at Grant Field on the 21st of May with the leading colleges competing from Maryland to Louisiana. Coach Hamm limited his team in this meet to a few select men, who made a fine showing for their Alma Mater.

The season was brought to a most successful close in the latter part of May with Coach Hamm acting host to the entire squad at a very fine barbecue.

George Griffin, graduate and star athlete at Tech of recent years, assumed the job of coaching the 1933 edition of the Georgia Tech track team. The squad was called together the latter part of February; and after a few weeks of hard work under the supervision of our popular trainer, Mike Chambers, the entire team seemed to be well on the way to a successful season. With the undefeated freshman team of last season promoted to the varsity ranks and only two or three varsity members eliminated by the process of graduation, prospects are indeed bright for the oncoming season.

At this writing the squad is preparing for a return engagement with the Clemson Tigers at the Flats. Clemson boasts of a much stronger aggregation this season, so the meet should be somewhat interesting.

The track schedule has been cut this season, as SWEENEY TUFTS will be in excellent shape for the meet with the Kentucky squad at Lexington.

Dean—Up from the freshman ranks of last year, this powerful sophomore will be duly welcomed to the varsity squad. He runs the hurdles and tosses the shot like a veteran.

Galloway—Charlie is captain of the team this season and is only a junior, therefore it is not necessary to speak of his track ability. Judging from his pre-season form, he will be a favorite in the Conference sprints.

Moore—As we all know, “Pinky” would be a valuable asset on any team and much is expected from him this season.

Davenport—Also up from the freshman ranks of last year, Jim will be counted on as the mainstay for the varsity quarter and half mile.

in the case of all other sports, but most of the men find no fault since it includes a trip to Lexington on the twenty-second in an effort to dislodge the Wildcat from its lair. The schedule also includes dual meets with Auburn and Georgia, the Southeastern A. A. U., to be held in Tuscaloosa, and the Southern Conference meet in Birmingham, which brings down the curtain in track for the current season.

At this time, Clemson has been met and defeated by the score of 70 to 56. The Tigers proved to be much stronger than expected, but the Jackets finally subdued their foe after many hotly contested events. Norris Dean, giant sophomore, was the sensation of the meet by taking first in both hurdle events and placing in the javelin, shot, and discus.

With two more weeks of hard work the squad will be in excellent shape for the meet with the Kentucky squad at Lexington.

Dean—Up from the freshman ranks of last year, this powerful sophomore will be duly welcomed to the varsity squad. He runs the hurdles and tosses the shot like a veteran.

Galloway—Charlie is captain of the team this season and is only a junior, therefore it is not necessary to speak of his track ability. Judging from his pre-season form, he will be a favorite in the Conference sprints.

Davenport—Also up from the freshman ranks of last year, Jim will be counted on as the mainstay for the varsity quarter and half mile.

Cross Country

The Cross Country Squad, under the tutelage of George Griffin, gained both experience and stamina during their six weeks of hard training last fall. No intercollegiate meets were held, but letters were awarded to several outstanding stars who made record time over the course throughout the season.

With most of the same material returning for another year, the prospects are very bright for a championship team in the fall of ’33.

Those men awarded letters were:

It is the freshman track team that makes and develops Tech's future track and field stars. More than one Southern Conference champion has served his season under the colors of the Baby Jackets. The freshmen work out daily, along with the varsity, under the careful supervision of Tech's able coaching staff where particular attention is given their form—for form is the one thing a good track man must have.

This year's squad looks unusually fine, with several former prep school stars working hard to earn their numerals. Much is expected of young Perrin Walker, former "one-man track team" of G. M. A. Puleston has shown fine pre-season form in the 440, while West looks good in the mile and 880. A tough schedule includes Tech High, Boys High, G. M. A., and the Georgia freshmen. This squad of young tracksters will furnish strong reinforcement for next year's varsity.

Swimming

GEORGIA TECH'S championship swimming team is looking forward to another bright season. The 1932 team was the unofficial champion of the Southern Conference, having been undefeated through a tough season. Wins were recorded in the state meet, in triangular and dual meets with Florida, Georgia, Auburn and Emory.

Only three men were lost to the 1933 team, Captain Ed Fain, John Ingle and Ed Patton having graduated, but reinforcements from last year’s frosh squad will aid greatly in replacing these men. Among the new men are Katz, McCarthy and Dougherty. These three are expected to give excellent accounts of themselves. Another bright light for this year’s team is the return of Charlie Wagner. Wagner was forced out of last year’s competition by an attack of appendicitis, however he has been looking better than ever in the early practice sessions.

Captain Harry Stover is due a great deal of credit for organizing this year’s team. Harry is a brilliant diver and swimmer and no few points will be added to Tech’s total through Harry’s efforts. Alternate Captain Carl Ingle, Red Smith, Martin, Woodard, LeRoux, Red Austin, Clem Johnson, Hurst, Emmet Adams and Vernon Brown round out a well-balanced team that is expected to repeat the many championship wins of last year.

The schedule for this year is cut short due to the fact that many schools have eliminated swimming from their sports program, however meets have been arranged with Auburn, Georgia, Emory, and arrangements have been made to compete in the state meet to be held here.

Rifle Team

DURING the 1932-33 school year the Georgia Tech Rifle Team fired forty-eight individual matches with teams representing various colleges throughout the country. Approximately two-thirds of the matches were won. The majority of the matches were carried on by mail. The team for the above matches consisted of fifteen men, the highest ten counting in each match. Each man fired ten shots in the prone, sitting, kneeling, and standing positions.

The team placed second in the Fourth Corps Area Matches, scoring 3,675 points out of a possible 4,000.

The team was coached and managed by Capt. A. G. Wing, Sgt. Patrick, and L. C. Deichler. The following men were outstanding in all the matches, making exceptionally high scores: Capt. J. E. Veal, J. H. Mulder, F. N. Everett, C. G. Johnson, L. C. Deichler, J. W. Lucas, W. F. Gillis, C. M. Lukey, and J. W. Martin.

Rifle Team
WHILE Tech's netmen of '32 enjoyed a most successful season, it is to the new edition of "racketeers" that the school is looking for many new records. Prospects are very bright for a championship team.

The squad will be comprised of five veterans and three men from an undefeated frosh team. Mac Jackson, West, Maynard, Holcomb and Arrington are the returning veterans, while Billy Reese, Max Keiser and Hank Crawford are the sophomores. Conniff and Morgan are the regulars of last year who are not returning.

Reese will probably be the outstanding individual of the team. He is state and city champion and has competed in many of the nation's major tournaments. Great things are expected of him during this season.

Due to insufficient finances the program of the team was shortened somewhat, but still quite an extensive schedule has been planned. Although the majority of the games are to be played at Tech or in the city, a trip has been planned to New Orleans, where the Jackets will meet the Tulane netmen. Other matches have been scheduled with the University of Alabama, Auburn, Mercer, Florida, Georgia and Clemson.

The 1933 golf team is expected to win many new awards for Tech. With a coterie of stars returning and real reinforcements coming up from the freshman team of last year the "good ole days" are here again.

Charlie Dannals, George Harris and Frank Ridley are the returning stars, while Charlie Yates, Berrien Moore and John Ridley are the sophomores who will complete the squad.

Last season's record was marked by many wins and few defeats. The team was victorious over many of the best collegiate squads in the nation and made good records in the tournaments in which it competed.

Present plans are for the golfers to take part in the national intercollegiate as well as in the southern tournaments. Meets have been scheduled with all nearby schools and universities in preparation for the national meets.

Yates and Moore have both won names for themselves in southern and national golfing circles, Yates having often been called the best Atlanta golfer since Bobby Jones. Charley has won state, city and southern championships, while Moore has also gathered a large collection of trophies.
