Applying military sensor expertise to the food processing industry, GTRI researchers are using an infrared computer vision scanning system to make meat products safer, tastier and less costly to produce.