The United States Navy presents a splendid opportunity for young men who meet the rigid mental and physical qualifications for engineering degrees and commissions in the Naval Reserve. Classroom work under excellent instructors and summer cruises to foreign ports provide training for the future officers of this great fighting branch.
Georgia Tech is fortunate to have a regular Naval ROTC unit at this school. During the recent war thousands of officers who received their training here served throughout the world. The unit today consists of one battalion of two companies, and the school is extremely proud of the fine work being done by the Midshipmen, who serve while they learn.
