Aeronautics Building

Nearing Completion

The finishing touches to the new $100,000 Daniel Guggenheim School of Aeronautics Building are being put on and by the end of the year it will be ready to move into its magnificent new quarters at the beginning of the next semester.

Although complete equipment will be on hand for the different classes, the library, offices, drawers, reading rooms, and study rooms are ready to receive students for experimental laboratory work. The big hangar has a floor area of 10,000 square feet, one floor is 10x10 feet in diameter, having air pressure of 1000 lbs. and 25 square feet per cubic inch of air, and are being driven by Professor Montgomery, Director of the Engineering School, and Professor R. R. Morley. The large wind tunnel is to be used for the determination of air speeds and for the determination of air pressure on models. The tunnel is 15x15 feet in diameter, having air pressure of 1000 lbs. per square inch, and are being driven by Professor Montgomery, Director of the Engineering School, and Professor R. R. Morley. The large wind tunnel is to be used for the determination of air speed and for the determination of air pressure on models.

The Tech is in immediate need of a new hangar, for the present one is too small to accommodate the large number of models which are being built. The new hangar will be 200 feet long and 100 feet wide, and will have a capacity of 500 models. It will be built of steel and will be fireproof. The hangar will be located at the corner of 16th St. and Piedmont Ave. The construction will be started immediately and will be completed in six months.

Difference in Complex

Incompleteness is a complex, high, long-sounding word for just what it is: a state of affairs in which something is not as it should be. It may be the result of our own failure to complete a task, or it may be the result of circumstances beyond our control. In either case, incompleteness can be frustrating and disheartening.

Many women that are good-looking have some special feature which is not in keeping with their general beauty. One such feature is the "bun," which is often found in the hair of women. This is a common feature among women in the United States.

The beauty of a woman is often measured by her hair, and the "bun" is considered to be a sign of beauty. However, the "bun" can also cause problems, such as difficulty in washing and styling.

There is a saying that "beauty is in the eye of the beholder," and this is certainly true when it comes to the "bun." Some women may feel that the "bun" is a necessary feature of their beauty, while others may see it as a flaw.

The "bun" is often associated with a certain time period, such as the 1920s or the 1930s. During this time, the "bun" was a popular hairstyle, and it was often seen in the movies and on the covers of magazines.

The "bun" is also associated with a certain type of beauty, such as the "beauty queen" or the "beauty contest." During the 1920s and 1930s, beauty contests were a popular way for women to showcase their beauty, and the "bun" was often a feature of the winning hairstyles.

In conclusion, the "bun" is a complex feature of beauty that is often associated with a certain time period and type of beauty. Its presence or absence can affect a woman's self-esteem and can be a source of pride or concern.

Is it not true that self-loathing is more serious than any sort of temporary guilt, and that self-reproach comes afterwards? For we can usually correct our mistakes, but we often make the same mistakes over again.

...from the evening page. We hope that your work at Tech will be pleasant and that your efforts with the local students will be successful. It has been the custom of the city's newspapers to play up the playing of both men and women at Great Falls, Conners when in Glot-Tech's backfield, and Dodd when his cattlemen and women graze on the fields. The reason is that the students are of interest and may be in some degree of interest to all of us. For the present, we can only hope that we may one day see both men and women playing football. Now is the time to begin. There is no time like the present.

Princeton Freshmen: An Association of the Class of 1931

At Princeton University—That freshmen at Princeton University prefer a Phi Beta Kappa key to a varsity "P," considering it the most essential attribute to the ideal girl, favoring play in the women's service and coming to Princeton primarily for that reason. In short, the argument is that "The Wives' Club" is the best place to find such girls.

In voting the Phi Beta Kappa key came first with 35, followed by the varsity "P" with 32 votes. The idea that Princeton is the best place to find attractive girls seems to have taken hold of some of the veterans.

A more 21 votes were cast against the idea of the women's service, while 50 votes came in favor of the idea that it is fun to come to Princeton.

JACKET CAGERS MEET BULLDOGS IN ATHENS

Tech and Georgia, rivals for the past half century or so, will open their 1931 competition Saturday afternoon, when Georgia Tech and Bulldogs tip up over the moon courts in Athens.

The Bulldogs have the better record so far and they are doped to win because of this record. However, it's a Tech-Georgia game and anything can happen.

The Tech jacket received a terrible blow this year when Ted Raines, former all-American prep center, was made between the two teams, as the respective teams.

Football Racket continues to Be

SUCCESs at College Press

Alumni and coaches this week have been meeting the major portion of the criticism directed at the so-called "football racket" which has gripped the heading college during this fall.

The California Daily Press says: "The paramount interest of an alumni official is the status of the college athletic team. If the football team fails to win, sometimes gets the ax. No one knows how far this dependence upon winning.

As long as he can win, he is considered the champion, and his word is law in every department of the school. This is the new look at the problem of the college sports.

The recent resignation of "Bugs" Price as football coach and athletic director at Berkeley is an example of this new look at the problem of the college sports.

After the departure of his predecessor, Price has been reduced in the estimation of the athletics department. He is looking at football with a new eye.

But let him step in another season, and he is as much as the rest. They are considering the problem of the college athletic team.

Just as the football season has come to a close, Price has been reduced in the estimation of the athletics department. He is looking at football with a new eye.

Not only Hampden-Sydney, but small colleges in general have won a victory in this fashion. There are no big universities, with the exception of Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, among the schools with the highest percentage of living graduates, in proportion, who have attained sufficient eminence to enroll them in Who's Who biographies in the book that is open before each class. School officials expect the improvement to aid in timely regular blowing of the old whistle that for years has called classes, the irregular blowing of which has resulted in tardy excuses for being late to classes, is no longer accepted by the professors.
