the highest honor that can be bestowed on an advanced military cadet is membership in the national society of scabbard and blade. membership in this famous military organization is based on a person's display of high personal integrity, outstanding leadership ability, good scholastic record, military interest, and active participation in other campus activities.

scabbard and blade works constantly to promote increased mutual understanding and a closer relationship among the three military departments on the tech campus. this group also seeks to develop fully the qualities of efficient and capable officers necessary for a strong and able armed forces.

this year this outstanding organization was led by harry whitehead, president; bob lewis, vice president; george harbourer, secretary; ben sumrall, treasurer; and faculty advisor lt. col. w. r. spruill, u.s.a.
there were one hundred and thirty-four army rotc cadets who attended five different rotc summer camps throughout the country from mid-june through july, 1961. tech achieved recognition from the camps that maintained "by institution" averages. among the individual awards and honors garnered by tech cadets, the highest went to harry c. whitehead, who was selected as the most outstanding of five hundred and fifty cadets at the ordnance-engineer camp. other awards went to william langford, thomas m. caney, charles davis, and lee reid. army rotc offers outstanding advantages to tech men.
the tech group of the national organization known as the pershing rifles is a military fraternity founded by general john j. pershing. the p.r.'s have many separate groups located in numerous rotc units throughout the nation. the outward activity of the organization is precision drill. however, the main purpose of the group is to benefit each individual by instilling confidence, discipline, and a sense of group pride in its members, thereby benefiting each individual. activities include participation in parades and ceremonies on and off campus. perhaps the pershing rifles are best known to georgia tech's student body through their performances at numerous football halftime ceremonies. membership is open to basic rotc cadets who are interested in extra-curricular military life.

since its commissioning in 1926, the naval reserve officer's training corps unit at georgia tech has commissioned almost two thousand officers in the u. s. navy and marine corps. the four year naval science course for reserve mid-shipmen and contract students leads to a commission as ensign in the navy line, supply engineer corps, supply corps; or second lieutenant in marine corps. most of their participants are contract students selected by p.n.s.
the navy rotc drill team is composed of mid-shipment volunteers, keenly interested in exhibition drill, military bearing, and who have a high sense of pride and honor. for the past three years, the rotc drill team has enjoyed the prestige of being the best at georgia tech. this year, the navy rotc drill team was commanded by mid-shipman lieutenant george a. harbour iii. praise should be given to midshipmen who manage to find time in their rigorous schedule to practice for the events and constantly win.

1962 marks the tenth anniversary of the air force rotc at georgia tech. during this time participation has steadily increased to a current enrollment in excess of one thousand cadets. over four hundred cadets have completed all requirements and have been commissioned second lieutenants in the air force reserve. the first two years of study emphasize the potentials of air and space power, and the importance of the air force in preserving the peace. the last two years develop the cadet into a capable leader and potential air force officer so he may be an air force officer.

The Arnold Air Society is an organization composed of outstanding Air Force ROTC cadets. The society strives to improve its association with other ROTC units at Georgia Tech, as well as its student-faculty relationships. Since the group is now a four-year organization, membership is offered to freshmen and sophomores, as well as advanced ROTC students. One of the society's most important objectives is the undertaking of a broad program of public relations, so that the layman may better know and understand the Air Force. Result is that the Air Force's standards will be raised.
