This report summarizes activity through July 10, 1986. Topics covered include:

a. Revised scope of services and time schedule.
b. Revised schedule of deliverables.
c. Activities to date.
d. Upcoming activities.

1. Revised scope of services and time schedule. Because the contract was started later than had been planned and because of unforeseen opportunities (such as the Scotina report and the Planning Department's willingness to provide updated data for the following revised time schedule and scope of services is proposed:

a. Center data collection: (21 May - 1 Sept)
   1. Interview recreation administrators (Director and staff, District Managers, Program staff)
   2. Update demographics. The City of Atlanta Planning Department has offered to help update demographics for the recreation center service areas established by Scotina in his December 1984 report. However these will only be provided for census tracts so will be principally used to establish growth rates rather than actual numbers.
   3. Prepare, administer and analyze questionnaires to be completed by recreation center directors to verify facilities, programs and staffing patterns and to provide input on present and future needs.
   4. Conduct site visits of 6-8 selected centers chosen to represent successful centers of various sizes, facility types and districts.

b. Analyze and Synthesize Data. (1 Sept. - 15 Sept.)
   1. Compile information from (a) above.
   2. Conduct a workshop with Recreation Center Directors to confirm above information and receive input on priorities and potential recommendations.

Prepare final report (15 Sept. - 15 October)
   1. A draft final report will be submitted to DPRCA for review.
   2. Ten hard copies of the final report will be presented to DPRCA.

The following revised schedule of deliverables is proposed to meet the above changes in scope of services.

Scope of Work Statement
Phase II - Recreation Center Analytical Study

I.B. Goals and Objectives (Revised 7/24/86)

The primary objective of this portion of the project is to develop recreation center staffing patterns that will make better use of the available resources and will respond to the present and future program needs of the city as a whole as well as the neighborhoods in which each center is located. Through a consideration of the physical facilities within which these programs operate, capital improvements can be more effectively planned and implemented.

The final product will include:

1. Documentation of staffing levels, program offerings, and demographic trends for each of the 39 DPRCA recreation centers (these will update and extend the Scotina report);
2. Needs for programs, facilities and staff as expressed by center directors, district managers and program staff;
3. Recommendations for improved staffing patterns for centers of different sizes and facilities.

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this project was to gather and analyze information about recreation centers run by the City of Atlanta Department of Parks, Recreation and Cultural Affairs in order to aid decision-making about these facilities. The emphasis by DPRCA administration was for centers to provide varied and attractive programs for patrons in the centers' service areas. As a result, at DPRCA's direction, needed and offered programs became the focus of the project. Several issues that affect what programs are needed and what can be offered were investigated and documented, such as the age-profile of the service area, the projected growth rate of the service area, staffing levels (as of Fall 1986), equipment and facilities.

Programs offered were recorded from published guides for Winter 1986 and Spring 1987. The focus of each program--toward children, teens, adults, or the elderly--was recorded from these guides and verified by center directors. Participation in existing programs and what programs were needed came from several sources: comments by center directors in a workshop, questionnaires filled out by center directors, and comments by district managers. In addition, needs for programs were derived from an analysis demographic profiles in each service area.

Demographic profiles were derived from 1980 census data and 1990 Atlanta Regional Commission projections. Service areas derived by Scotina (1983) were used for this project.

Existing and needed facilities and staffing were synthesized from documents provided by the DPRCA, center directors' questionnaire, and interviews with district managers and others.

This final report consists of data and recommendations organized by the five recreation districts and by individual centers. Where possible, data are also provided for each city council district.

METHODS

Many people have a role in the delivery of recreational services in the City of Atlanta. To adequately represent the opinions of these various groups, a range of research methods were employed: Interviews were conducted with DPRCA administrators; questionnaires were completed by Center Directors; a Center Directors' Workshop was held to augment and clarify questionnaire responses. All of the data was then entered onto a computer database for analysis.

Interviews with DPRCA Administrators

Interviews were conducted with key DPRCA personnel to establish the perceived adequacy of and needs for staffing, programs, facilities and equipment for Atlanta's recreation centers. Between July 29th and August 8th the following staff members were interviewed:

   Charles Hardnett, District Operations Manager
   Clinton Issac, District 1 Manager
   Marge Wood, District 3 Manager
Center Directors' Questionnaire

A questionnaire was developed to determine current levels and future needs with respect to programs, staff, and facilities. The Director of each of Atlanta's recreation centers provided information on staffing patterns and staff specialization. Winter and Spring (1986) schedules of program offerings were annotated to indicate target age groups and participation rates. Facilities available at each center were documented. Directors were requested to provide prioritized lists of future needs with respect to programs, staff, and facilities. Questionnaires were distributed in September, 1986, with results from all centers completed by December, 1986.

Center Directors' Workshop

A workshop was held October 28, 1986 with all Center Directors to verify and augment results from the questionnaire survey. The purposes of the workshop were twofold. First it was intended to gather information which had not been obtained by that time. A center Director Questionnaire was sent to each recreation center approximately one month before the workshop. (Out of forty-two centers, less than 30% had responded with complete information.) To insure valid results, it was necessary to hold the workshop so that the missing information could be sought. The second purpose of the workshop was to prioritize the desired center changes. From the questionnaires received, a list of changes in staff, programs, and facilities was developed. At the workshop, this list was lengthened by adding the desired changes of non-respondents as well as the new changes of respondents. Then the entire list for each district was prioritized through the discussion of the center directors.

The procedure used in the workshop was primarily one of discussion. The center directors present were first divided into their five respective districts. Each of these groups was headed by a discussion leader, who was a member of the Georgia Tech team. Changes in staff, programs, and facilities were then discussed separately. As each additional change was mentioned, it was added to an existing list on flip-chart pads. Once the additional changes were completed, the entire list was prioritized for the district as a whole for each of these three areas. This was done through discussion and mutual agreement among the center directors for each district.

The Recreation Centers Data Base

The Recreation Centers Data Base (RCDB) has been developed using a very user-friendly data base called "Reflex" by Borland. (Reflex manual is particularly clearly written, and is recommended for anyone who will use the system on a regular basis. Also, these comments only refer to Reflex version 1.1 the way it is currently installed; any future version or modification may differ.)
Overview. Reflex is a database manager. That is, it allows manipulation of data in a number of different ways. Specifically, the RCDB contains a number of fields of information about each of the recreation centers, including staffing, facilities, programs, and population served. Some sample analyses that can be asked of the system:

1. Listing of population profiles for each center, or for each district.
2. Listing of staff, facilities, hours, programs for each center or district.
3. Listing of program participation levels for each center.

It should be recognized that the information derived from this database is only as good as the information input. Participation levels were derived from questionnaires sent to center directors. Whereas efforts were made to check these figures with district managers and others, this was not always possible. Also, some information is missing due to lack of response by centers despite repeated requests.

Organization of the RCDB. The RCDB is organized into individual files for each center much like an individual file folder. These may be accessed in several different formats:

1. The form view displays one center on the screen at a time. It shows fields for the center, such as "Elderly population 1980" on the screen;
2. The list view lists each center;
3. The report view allows development of custom reports.

SUMMARY OF CENTER DIRECTORS' WORKSHOP

Prepared for the Department of Parks, Recreation and Cultural Affairs, City of Atlanta by the College of Architecture, Georgia Institute of Technology
Workshop Summary

Objective of the Project

The Recreation Center Analytical Study is a project sponsored by the Department of Parks, Recreation, and Cultural Affairs of the City of Atlanta, and is being directed by the College of Architecture at the Georgia Institute of Technology. Its primary objective is to provide information about staffing patterns, programs, and facilities for recreation centers in Atlanta. This information comes from questionnaires with center directors, interviews, site visits, and other ways of determining the fit of available staff, current programs, and existing facilities.

Purpose of the Workshop

The purposes of the workshop were twofold. First, it was intended to gather information which had not been obtained by that time. A center Director Questionnaire was sent to each recreation center approximately one month before the workshop. (Out of forty-two centers, less than 30% had responded with completed information.) To ensure valid results, it was necessary to hold the workshop so that the missing information could be sought. The second purpose of the workshop was to prioritize the desired center changes. From the questionnaires received, a list of changes in staff, programs, and facilities was developed. At the workshop, this list was lengthened by adding the desired changes of non-respondents as well as the new changes of respondents. Then the entire list for each district was prioritized through the discussion of the center directors. The findings are summarized here and can serve to guide the decisions of the department administration in allocating funds, distributing staff and programs, and planning facilities.

Workshop Procedure

The procedure used in the workshop was primarily one of discussion. The center directors present were first divided into their five respective districts. Each of these groups was headed by a discussion leader, who was a member of the Georgia Tech team. Changes in staff, programs, and facilities were then discussed separately. As each additional change was mentioned, it was added to an existing list on flip-chart pads. Once the additional changes were completed, the entire list was prioritized for the district as a whole for each of these three areas. This was done through discussion and mutual agreement among the center directors for each district.

Summary of Key Points

The following changes and comments are general for the five districts. These seemed to be prevalent opinions among all groups.
Staff

- Additional staff needed because current number is inadequate for participation.
- Quality volunteers needed to meet the demand when sufficient funds are not available.
- A larger variety of specialized staff is needed.

Major priorities:

1) RL II for dance, gymnastics, and arts & crafts
2) RL II for coaching

Programs

- More cultural programs needed
- Programs for teens essential to occupy time
- Programs for senior citizens needed

Major priorities:

1) Cultural programs
2) Seniors programs
3) Teens programs

Facilities/Equipment

- Center renovations needed for determining centers
- Each center needs input into the purchase of its equipment according to facilities & programs
- Vans needed for transportation
- Outdoor lighting needed to extend program time

Major priorities:

1) Renovate centers needing such treatment
2) Lighting of outdoor fields & courts
3) Ceramic rooms
