Dr. Peterson
FBI Briefing
9:30-11 a.m. Thursday, Aug. 29, 2013, GTRI Conference Center, 250 14th Street
We are global, and perhaps no other group is as aware of that than academics. In our electronic world, information can be disseminated instantly. And, with cloud computing there are sometimes limitations on security. It is in our best interest to have our eyes open about foreign threats to sensitive research, and steps we can take to keep it secure.

Our workshop today is the first step in engaging the faculty we serve in the process of managing the administration of research in the export controlled environment. Aside from offering education, information, and a different perspective, the briefing will provide faculty and researchers with an opportunity to ask questions about when and how export controls apply to your research engagements.

We are honored to have FBI Agent Jon Watson and Special Supervisory Agent Kimberly Shelley here today to provide a general briefing on research in an export controlled environment.

(Share about personal experience with FBI at a general level)

I understand that you are live streaming my Institute Address at 11. I hope you will stay for that, or come and join us in Clough 152.

Thank you for participating in today’s event, and for your commitment to staying on top of the collective threats to sensitive research.